

NONE WERE LEFT OUT

Boys by the Hundred Were Given Christmas Dinners.

WAITED ON BY BUSINESS MEN

Lockery Hall the Scene of the Notable Feast—Music and Short Speeches on the Program.

If there was a boy in this city who went without a first-class Christmas dinner yesterday, it was his own fault. The city kept open house yesterday and in Lockery hall and through the munificence of some of the citizens a table fit to make the heart of Santa Claus rejoice, was spread. These were guests by the hundred, and appetites of the small boy filled with all the good things yet offered, filled, yes, stuffed, and yet there were many baskets of provisions left over.

The official program called for the assembling of the boys at 11 o'clock yesterday morning, but they began to get themselves in readiness long before that hour. By 11 o'clock Pearl street, in front of the Lockery building, was a moving mass of youthful enthusiasm. The boys were full of fun, had on their best clothes, and were for the most part clean faces, hands only so so.

Marched to the Hall. When something like order had been brought out of the chaos, Warburg's band appeared and the boys, headed by the band, marched to the hall. There were about 600 of the "kiddies" and upon reaching the hall there was a moment of a scramble, as the tables were set only 430. Those unable to find seats at the tables were given seats on the floor of the hall, with the assurance that they would fare as well as any. After the boys were seated, the well-known business men who had been appointed to wait upon them, marched into and around the hall, each being decorated with a long white apron. The boys eyed them critically and made some very pertinent remarks as to the appearance of the table waiters pro tem.

Welcomed by the Mayor. On the stage were stationed two bands, Warburg's and Bowe's, which alternately discoursed fine music during the progress of the feast. Mayor Stuart and the Rev. Dan F. Bradley were also there, and when the mayor rung a bell, eager eyes were turned toward the decorated stage where, amid a grove of palms the chief magistrates of the city stood. Mr. Stuart, befitting the occasion, was brief in making his address of welcome, and after telling the boys he was proud to be allowed to call such an assemblage to order, and that the feast was an evidence that the men did not forget the boys, introduced Mr. Bradley, who invoked the divine blessing upon the gathering.

Then They Fell To. All was now ready for the feast to begin, and under the direction of the captains of the tables, staid citizens began bringing on the edibles amid a cross fire of orders from those at the tables calculated to make them understand what was expected of a table waiter, some going so far as to suggest that prompt service might be productive of nickel "tips." The menu served was beautiful and diversified and the rapidity with which the following class of substantial disappeared was unequaled except in the workings of a slight-of-hand show. There was roast turkey with cranberry sauce, roast spring chickens (with all the springs extracted) stuffed with dressing, ham with champagne sauce, Saratoga chips, hot scalloped oysters, mince, apple and pumpkin pie, English plum pudding, coffee and milk, doughnuts, fruits and nuts.

Closing Exercises. Those who were waiting were finally given places at the tables and soon all were fed and the restlessness of small boys with very full stomachs was discernable in the constant clatter of shoes upon the floor and the buzz of many voices. The galleries were crowded with ladies and gentlemen who showed the greatest interest in the proceedings and for the most part remained until the final address was made.

Amid a clatter which almost drowned his voice, Mayor Stuart announced that Messrs. Kromer, Robinson and Miller would sing for the boys and those gentlemen appeared and rendered "A Ca-tastrophe" through the room, boys made the sound of anything else a brass band inaudible at ten feet from the stage. The song ran:

There was a boy, there was a lack,
There was a teacher now,
The lack set down upon its head,
The teacher said, "I'll see the point,
Then up he rose, and said the boy,
Who shows in every joint,
(The boy) I only want it for a joke,
(The teacher) I failed to see the point.

Mayor Stuart introduced the Hon. T. F. McQuay, who dressed in his waiter's apron and made a brief talk to the boys in which he gave them much good advice, and especially impressed upon them that the citizens had provided the feast for them because they wanted to be kind to them and not because they had "learned to chew ter-bones just to keep their mouths tight white." This closed the exercises and the boys dispersed, each one as he went out receiving from the committee composed of Mrs. A. J. Elliott, Mrs. E. A. Lamos and Mrs. A. May, a paper bag containing candy, oranges, nuts and sweet cakes.

After the 600 boys had been fed, 100 baskets of food were prepared from what was left and were sent out to poor families. A barrel of crackers was sent to each charitable home and there remains an abundance of baskets already filled to be sent out today.

City News in Brief. George A. McIntyre of the Democrat was not looking for "necrops" yesterday. He had a most important item in the shape of a bouncing Christmas boy which arrived early in the morning, but he did not try to keep the news. On the contrary he spread the glad tidings everywhere, and if the hotel items in this morning's paper are a little mixed, you may know the reason why.

The funeral of Mrs. Rita C. Blood, the wife of William H. Blood, who died Sunday, will be held at her late residence, No. 40 Housman, this afternoon at 4 o'clock, conducted by the Rev. Campbell Fair. The remains will be taken to Hastings Wednesday morning for interment.

A pleasant Christmas entertainment was given in the U. B. church on Buchanan street last evening. A musical and literary program was rendered, the small children were given a treat and a collection for the poor was taken. John Casey, Ralph Osborn, George Brown and Frank Watson were arrested on West Bridge street last evening for loitering. They are a very tough looking quartet and will have to face the court today.

The funeral of Alvin R. Mosley will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock from the residence of his brother, T. F. Mosley, No. 352 Cherry street, corner Jefferson square.

County Treasurer Stebbins and his assistant were busy a large part of the day yesterday getting the books in shape to close up the year.

Miss Margaret Child of Lyon place is spending the holidays with her parents in Detroit.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR

The Local Commandery Piously Celebrated Christmas Day.

Yesterday morning at 11 o'clock all of the 100,000 Knights Templar who could, in the United States, assembled in their commanderies to celebrate the Christmas festival and to felicitate Grand Commander Hugh McCurdy on his reelection. In response to the recommendation of the Christmas observance committee, De Molai commandery assembled yesterday morning at the appointed hour and listened to the annual communication of Grand Master McCurdy, which pictured in glowing language the principles of templarism, ending with the following toast:

"To the valiant Sir Knights of the nineteenth century, one hundred thousand strong. No less sons of illustrious ancestors, whose knightly lives shed increasing lustre upon a glorious past and illumine the present with the inspiring hope of a brighter future."

In response to this following toast, recommended by the Christmas committee, was drunk by De Molai commandery in common with all the other commanderies of the United States:

"To Our Most Eminent Grand Master, Hugh McCurdy."

A hundred thousand Knights Templar sent greetings, wishing him a merry Christmas, with peace, health and happiness. In behalf of De Molai commandery, Eminent Commander George F. Bush, sent a congratulatory telegram to Grand Master McCurdy, praying that heaven's choicest blessings might rest on him and his. A program of toasts and responses was then carried out as follows by members of the commandery:

"Our Grand Master, Sir Knight Frank A. Rogers."
"Sir Knight Earl of the Bay."
"Sir Knight Charles W. Watkins."
"The symbol of Templarism."
"Sir Knight Rev. Dr. Fisher."

The exercises of the day were then concluded by a brief address by Bush, Eminent Commander George F. Bush. Next Sunday evening the members of De Molai commandery will attend Unity church in full uniform and will listen to a sermon by the Rev. Dr. Fisher, in which the history of De Molai commandery will be embodied. Dr. Fisher, who is prelate of the commandery, has spent a great deal of time for more than a year in looking up this subject, and the sermon will be well worth hearing, even by those not interested in templarism.

ITS WORK NEARLY DONE

L. M. Weston Says the Michigan Commissioners Were Economical.

Chairman L. M. Weston of the Michigan State Fair commission came home from Chicago for Christmas. He was asked yesterday how the commission was getting on with its work, and replied that the work of the commission was nearly completed. There remained little to do except to make their reports. He says there is still $5,000 in the fund, and that a number of claims yet to be paid, there will be money enough to pay everything. The commissioners decided long ago upon a policy which would leave money in the treasury when the commission ceased to exist. There will be a meeting of the commissioners in this city January 2. It is expected that the work will be completed and the reports will be made.

Mr. Weston says he delivered the Michigan building over to the purchasers of it last week, and it will very soon be out of existence, so far as Jackson park is concerned. The stone arch which is coming to this city from the mining building is being loaded on cars. The work of tearing it down having been begun last Friday, it will probably arrive in the city the last of the present week. Mr. Weston says the fair grounds look very ragged, and are piled high with rubbish and packed goods, which are being rapidly carted away and shipped back to the parties who exhibited them.

Beautiful Christmas Menus.

In accordance with their usual custom, Grand Rapids landlords yesterday regaled their guests with dinners of unusual excellence in honor of the Christmas festival. And not only the inner man of the earth, earthy was satisfied, but his aesthetic sense was refreshed by the beauty of the menus which were indeed worthy mementos of the occasion. The New Livingston led off with a beautiful souper, bound with pink cord, on the cover of which was a Christmas landscape, daintily printed in colors. The menu was a dainty little booklet, printed in gold and tied with watered silk ribbon. Colonel Ruseley's cards were neatly printed and laid together with old gold ribbon and had the peculiarity for which they are always noted, i. e. they are printed in Grand Rapids. It being one of the coldest of the season, to patronize home talent wherever possible.

Presented With Badges.

There was little to stir the monotonous sameness of affairs at the county jail yesterday. The prisoners spent the long dreary day as they do other days and the feelings that come so benignly to other members of society found no place in their hearts. Turnkey Carroll and Husted were not forgotten by Sheriff Lamoreaux and each of them were a handsome gold star on his left breast. The stars are inscribed with "Deputy Sheriff Kent County" and were given to show Mr. Lamoreaux's appreciation of faithful service.

Funeral of Arnold De Bolt.

The body of Arnold De Bolt was taken to Hastings for burial yesterday morning. About forty members of the McCabe, of which order he was a member, were present and escorted the remains to the depot. The Horse Shovers' union was also present in a body. Mr. De Bolt was a member of Cooper'sville tent, and Commander George Stevens, Charles Dechauss, Marvin Tripp and Bert Storrs came from Cooper'sville tent and accompanied the remains to Hastings.

Christmas at the Y. M. C. A.

It was very quiet in the Young Men's Christian Association building until after noon yesterday, but about 1 o'clock the members began coming in and it was lively the balance of the day and during the evening. The basketball team spent two or three hours in practicing for the game which they expect to win in Kalamazoo December 28. Other members passed the time in reading or in playing parlor games.

SHE IS THE QUEEN

Mrs. Showalter, Wife of the Champion of this Country.

WELL KNOWN IN GRAND RAPIDS

An Interview With the Lady Who Will Make Chess Experts Look to Their Laurels.

The New York Recorder devotes a column to an interview with Mrs. J. W. Showalter, wife of the champion chess player, and herself a magnificent player. Mrs. Showalter is a sister of N. M. Marshall of this city and is known to many Grand Rapids people. The Recorder says of Mrs. Showalter "she is a typical Kentucky woman from Georgetown, the heart of the blue grass region. She is only 22 years of age, and scarcely looks that, has very abundant golden-brown hair, full violet blue eyes and a charming peachlike color to her cheeks."

"A man who can play a great game of chess can never be a fool," it has been said. If that is so, then here is a woman who can, and since we are getting over our amazement at what a woman can do in this last decade of the century, we may look for a feminine general in the next great war.

Mrs. Showalter is a real make a very "fishing" officer, since she can ride like a Centaur, and handle a gun with the aim of a western scout.

At Kokomo, Indiana, where the match was played between Mr. Showalter and Emanuel Lasker not long ago, Mrs. Showalter played with C. D. Jackson, the champion of Indiana. The first game lasted between two and three hours, and resulted in a draw. In the afternoon Mr. Jackson was anxious to play another game. In this Mrs. Showalter checkmated him in twenty-three moves. She won the third and fourth games also from the Indiana champion.

"How long have you been playing chess?" was asked of the chess queen, as she sat frolicking with a gray and white kitten in her cozy parlor.

"Oh, about six years," was the answer. "I was married at 18 and my husband took so much interest in the game I asked him to teach me. He began by giving me the odds of a queen and, as I learned quite rapidly, he played the game with me a good deal."

"Does he give you odds now?"

"He can't give me the odds of a knight and win the game, though with the odds of a pawn and two moves I cannot beat him."

"Now, really," added Mrs. Showalter, very modestly, "I don't think I play a good enough game to have anything said about me. I don't know how I do it. I have very few theories about openings and such things and have never studied books on the subject."

"I played at the international tournament held here at the Manhattan and Brooklyn clubs, and I was matched against Mr. Colwell, the 'club humorist' as they call him. The game was drawn. A good many people watched that game."

"Does it annoy you to have so many looking on?"

"Yes, it does. I have not feeling enough publicly to get over a feeling of nervousness when several are watching."

"I am now a member of the New York Chess club in New York in January, for the championship of the world. Mr. Steinitz has had that honor for a quarter of a century, but is now getting to be an old man. Mr. Lasker is only about 24, and comes from Berlin, where he was the champion of Germany. He took the first prize in the international tournament, and did not lose one game."

"Mr. Lasker gives me the odds of one knight, and we have played four games. I lost the first and fourth, and won the second and third. About four years ago I played a game with Mr. Lasker, he giving me the odds of a rook, and I won."

"Are you ever taken unaware—that is, do you ever lose a piece when you are not expecting it?"

"Very seldom. I did, though, in that first game with Mr. Lasker. He was very much amused at it. I suppose I was rather nervous at playing with such a champion, and lost my head a little. Early in the game, about the fifth or sixth move, he captured a knight in that way, so then I had lost my odds, and we were evenly matched."

"Have you any special openings of which you are fond?"

"None in particular. I have to take my cue from my opponent, and, as I generally play with those who give me odds, they have the opening move. I like the knight's defense, though, when I can possibly play it. When I begin with the king's pawn, I generally bring the knights out in the next move."

"Which can you use to best advantage, knights or bishops?"

"I like my bishops best, especially when I can have them both. They sweep each other up."

"Do you bring your queen out early in the game?"

"Never, though I like to have the other pieces out where I can work with them. I like a good open field. If I am hemmed in I can do nothing. Give me an open game and the odds of a knight, and I can—really, you must not say I said that—I don't want to brag."

"And the pretty chess queen grow a shade rosier, as the little chess queen looked modestly down."

"Do you find many good chess players among women?"

"Oh, no, indeed. I find very few women who can play at all. I never have played but with three or four, and they were very poor at it. Though, of course, I know there are some fair players in this country; Miss Giffert is one."

"How is that, when you are so fond of outdoor sports, riding, skating and walking, you can sit for three or four hours over a game of chess?"

"Oh, I get so absorbed in the game I never know anything about time. But I am very fond of being out of doors, and I think nothing of walking from Fourteenth street up to the park."

St. Mark's Generous People.

In response to the announcement that the hungry would be fed, fifty people who were somewhat down on their luck, were regaled with hot coffee and meat sandwiches in St. Mark's chapel between five and six o'clock last evening. All those present seemed very grateful for their Christmas supper. Fixtures were not furnished, because it was supposed that nearly all the guests would bring their appetites, and well sharpened appetites at that, with them. This supposition proved true, as one man drank eleven cups of coffee, besides devouring an indefinite number of sandwiches. The nurses of St. Mark's training school gave a Christmas tree last evening for the benefit of the patients in the hospital. The tree was set up in the surgical ward, and all the inmates of the hospital were made happy by this bit of Christmas cheer in the midst of their sadness and pain. Miss Hobbs, principal of the nurse's training school, was present with a beautiful lamp and stand. A large number of visitors were present and took part in the festivities.

Her Left Arm Broken.

Miss Van Dine, living six miles from the city on the Walker road, was riding with a companion on West Bridge street yesterday when in turning around the horse became frightened and cap-sized the buggy. The young man escaped uninjured but Miss Van Dine's left arm was fractured above the elbow. Dr. Albright reduced the fracture.

Rained the Car Tracks.

Superintendent of Tracks Campbell of the street railroad company was busy yesterday with a gang of men at the corner of Wealthy avenue and Fuller street raising the car tracks. At that point whenever it has rained or snowed the rails have to be covered so that it was necessary to raise the tracks six inches.

Is Slightly Demented.

Samuel Taggart, whose home is in Luther, Michigan, was reported to have wandered away from his home on Lyon street yesterday afternoon. He is slightly demented and is here for medical treatment. A description of the man was given to the police, and he was picked up about 5 o'clock and taken back to his home.
